RESTART THE DEAL

Six ready messages for six kinds of importer silence.

SIX SILENCES SIX MESSAGES

Find your account's silence and go to its page.

NO REPLY

No follow-up after a meeting at the fair.

WE'LL SEE

Said they would revisit next season, no date given.

SAMPLES SENT

Samples or sheets went out, then nothing.

ONE REPLY

Replied once, then silence after that.

NEW BUYER

The contact changed and the thread got lost.

NOT NOW

Said not now, without a date to return to.

Each message has its own page, ready to copy.

MESSAGE 1

NO REPLY

Weeks passed since the fair and nothing came back. This message doesn't repeat the pitch, it opens a new angle.

Hi {Name},

Since we met at the stand on {date}, I didn't want to send the same pitch again.

One thing changed since then: {specific detail: a new vintage, a volume, a term}. Thought it was worth showing you.

Does it make sense to pick this up this week?

Change the angle every time. Never resend the same pitch.

MESSAGE 2

WE'LL SEE

They said they would revisit it and left no date. This message gives a new reason to answer, not a request for a decision.

Hi {Name},

Not asking what you decided, I know it's still open.

Writing because {new reason: a similar account already working this way, a changed term, a real date}.

Does it make sense to look again before {date}?

Never ask any news. Bring the news yourself.

MESSAGE 3

SAMPLES SENT

Samples or sheets went out and then silence. This message confirms they arrived and asks one specific question.

Hi {Name},

Checking that the samples or sheets for {wine} reached {company} in good shape.

If you've already tasted: {specific question, e.g. does the format fit your current range}?

If not yet, tell me what's missing and I'll sort it this week.

A specific question gets answered. A how's it going gets ignored.

MESSAGE 4

ONE REPLY

They replied once with a yes, then nothing after. This message returns to that exact yes, with one small step.

Hi {Name},

On {date} you said yes to {what they agreed to}.

To take the next step I just need {one concrete thing: a quantity, a date, a document}.

Can we close that this week?

Always return to the exact yes they gave, in their own words.

MESSAGE 5

NEW BUYER

The contact moved roles or companies and the thread went with them. This message speaks to whoever is new, without assuming they know the history.

Hi {Name},

Saw you're now {role} at {company}. I worked before with {previous contact} on {specific topic}.

Here's the one-line version of where things stood: {one-line summary}.

Would it make sense to pick it up from there?

Never assume the new contact read the old thread.

MESSAGE 6

NOT NOW

They said not now, without a date to return to. This message asks for that date and respects whatever they give.

Hi {Name},

On {date} you said it wasn't the moment, and I respected that.

So I don't write too soon, when would make sense to hear from me again: {option A} or {option B}?

I'll note the date you give and write then, with something new.

A not now without a date comes back six months later as an open question.

ORDER AND TIMING

When to use each message.

- ☐ Check your list and mark how long each account has been quiet.
 - ☐ No reply after a fair meeting, over 30 days: use NO REPLY.
 - ☐ Said we'll see, no date: use WE'LL SEE at day 20.
 - ☐ Samples or sheets sent: use SAMPLES SENT at day 10.
 - ☐ One reply only: use ONE REPLY as soon as you notice the gap.
 - ☐ Contact changed: use NEW BUYER in the first week you learn of it.
 - ☐ Not now: use NOT NOW on the date they gave, or at day 90 if none was given.

BEFORE YOU SEND

Run this for every message.

☐ You checked the exact date of the last real contact.

☐ You have a new reason, not a repeat of the first message.

☐ The message names something specific about that account, not a template.

☐ There's a clear question or date at the end.

☐ You logged which message you used and when.

☐ No reply in 7 days: move to the next template.

MAKE IT PERMANENT

Written by hand, these six messages cover one batch. Every week more accounts go quiet, and the messages have to go out again without losing any of them.

Agent DM+ does that part: it sources accounts by the profile you set, researches each one before writing, drafts the first message and the follow-ups in your own words, and keeps the day 3 and day 7 cadence without depending on your memory.

It reads replies and keeps a record per account of who wrote, when and what was said. It shows you every message before it sends.

It doesn't detect buying signals on its own, and it doesn't see a sample shipment or a buyer change unless you log it first. It finds accounts, it doesn't close the sale for you.

THE FULL CADENCE

This is just the template. If you want to see how I build the full cadence behind it, including the calendar:
